Alfa Laval wins SEK 150 million order in India for its clean technologies

Alfa Laval – a world leader in heat transfer, centrifugal separation and fluid handling – has won an order for three thermal evaporation systems from Vedanta Aluminum Limited for its expansion project in India. The order value is about SEK 150 million and delivery is scheduled for 2009.

Did you know that Alfa Laval has been present in India even longer than the nation has existed? The first representative office opened as early as 1937 - ten years before India's independence from Great Britain.
