Interim Report

TACTIVO™ FOR iPAD LAUNCHED AND NEW ISSUE OF SHARES OVERSUBSCRIBED

INTERVIEW WITH THOMAS MARSCHALL, CEO AND PRESIDENT, PRECISE BIOMETRICS

What can you say about your development during the third quarter?
The roll out of the new product series Tactivo™ has continued. As we know, Tactivo™ is the world's first smart casing with embedded fingerprint and smart card reader. Together with the right apps it allows organizations and companies to maintain a high level of security when their employees use mobile units to access sensitive information.

After Tactivo™ was certified for iPhone in Apple's Made for iPhone program (MFi) in the Spring, the iPad version has now also been approved and launched in September.

The launch of Tactivo™ for iPhone and iPad has attracted a great deal of interest on the global market and we have received orders from several companies and government agencies during this quarter. Several civil and military agencies in the US have also started pilot projects based on Tactivo™, which can lead to larger orders later on.

We have also initiated cooperation with different partners, which among other things has resulted in Thursby Software Systems now offering a package solution with Tactivo™ and PKard. This is the first integrated solution for government agencies that ensures a secure environment for web reading by utilizing the smart cards already used for internal identification. Cooperation has also been initiated with HID Global to enable security for mobile devices based on smart cards that are currently used by the U.S. government (CAC and PIV cards).

How are sales of Tactivo™ developing?
The first order for Tactivo™, which came from one of the world's largest vehicle manufacturers, has been followed by several other orders during this quarter. Government agencies in the US and companies with a global presence have been the main source of interest, but government agencies in other countries have also expressed their interest.

The leading solution suppliers among our partners have also begun placing orders to meet the demands of their customers for Tactivo™. As an example has Thursby Software Systems and another well-known player placed orders for over one thousand Tactivo™ units, combination of Tactivo™ for iPhone and Tactivo™ for iPad, for delivery in the fourth quarter.

What is happening in the business area IAM?
There has been a positive development for the federal ID card project underway in Nigeria. Political priorities in the country have, however, delayed the roll out of the national ID card project, so that earnings from this project are not anticipated to come in before 2013.

After the end of this quarter we have also initiated cooperation with the Inpeco Group, which is a leading company in automated solutions for health care. The objective of this cooperation is to introduce Precise Match-on-Card™ technology in the company's systems for handling blood samples to ensure a correct link between patients and samples throughout the entire process. This is a new application for Precise Biometrics' technology and is an indication of the higher level of maturity in the market for biometric security solutions and the commercial possibilities for our proven technology.

Can you comment on the fact that your new issue of shares was oversubscribed?
We expect a very large and expanding potential for Precise Biometrics in the market for mobile security. The great interest that Tactivo™ has already encountered from government agencies, companies and partners for iPhone and iPad clearly support this assumption. External assessments also point towards this and for example the analysis company Gartner Group has estimated the market for smart devices like mobile phones and tablets to be more than one billion units in 2014 - opening a significant future potential for Precise Biometrics.

The capital injection from the share issue means that we can continue to vigorously run the launch of Tactivo™ and develop our security solutions for the mobile market.

We anticipate that additional customer pilot projects will be initiated soon, and that their successful implementation will lead to larger orders. This means that we expect sales of Tactivo™ to increase during the fourth quarter this year, and to continue to increase quarter by quarter.
