

Airthings and Schneider Electric sign an agreement to distribute and commercialize the Airthings for Business solution

Oslo, 17 November 2020 – Airthings, a global leader in indoor air quality solutions and energy-saving technology, has signed an agreement with Schneider Electric, the leader in the digital transformation of energy management and automation, to distribute and commercialize the Airthings for Business solution. The agreement is to include and sell the solution in the regions where Airthings operates. Today that includes Europe and North America.

“There has never been a greater focus on health, air quality, and sustainability than there is today,” says Oyvind Birkenes, CEO at Airthings. “As people spend on average 90% of their time indoors, monitoring the air we breathe is fundamental to creating safe and comfortable spaces that increase productivity while reducing costs. We’re thrilled to partner with global leaders like Schneider Electric and empower their customers to breathe better by taking control of the indoor air quality.”

A solution for any building

Buildings can harbor high levels of harmful substances and create conditions that are detrimental to not only health and wellbeing but productivity too. The Airthings for Business solution lets you monitor, visualize and control your indoor air quality to ensure a safe and healthy environment. Set up in a matter of minutes, the wireless monitors run on long-lasting batteries, making the solution easily scalable and customizable to any new or existing space.
