DOCdata reports the sale of a MicroPerf[®] system.

Industrial Automation Integrators (IAI) B.V. in Veldhoven, a subsidiary of DOCdata N.V. in Waalwijk, will supply a Laser-Perforation-System for the application of the patented security feature MicroPerf[®] to a banknote printing company. The delivery of this system is planned by mid-2008. This system will replace a MicroPerf[®] system that is operational since 1997. The turnover involved with the sale of the new MicroPerf[®] system totals up to well over €2 million. The order clearly demonstrates IAI's position in the security printing market, where IAI offers systems for the application of security features to passports, identity cards, banknotes and other security documents.

Main contractor for this project is KBA-Giori S.A. in Lausanne, Switzerland, the marketing and sales subsidiary of König & Bauer (KBA) in Würzburg (www.kba-print.de) for the banknote-printing market. KBA-Giori is by far the leading supplier of equipment to banknote printers. Both IAI and the manufacturer of printing presses KBA are subcontractors. The KBA- and IAI-(sub)systems are integrated into one system for the application of MicroPerf[®] at the customer's site.

The MicroPerf[®] security feature, an invention of the Swiss security printer Orell Füssli (www.ofs.ch), is now applied in Swiss, Latvian and Russian banknotes. It consists of a pattern of minute, laser-applied holes, which become visible when the note is held to the light.
