

Automated document stream provides control and review of the purchase process

Qurius and Ricoh launch Invoice Workflow

Zaltbommel – 12 October 2010 – Invoice Workflow is the joint solution of Qurius and Ricoh, completely automating the stream of purchasing documents. This enables us to offer our customers control and overview of the purchase process, a watertight solution and directly linked to the financial administration. Both Qurius and Ricoh aim at supplying sustainable, innovative products and technologies and help their customers organise their processes in a more efficient and smarter way, the result being lower costs and higher productivity.

Leen Zevenbergen, Qurius NV: "We want to take the lead when it comes to providing sustainable IT solutions. Ricoh shares our passion for sustainability and innovation and we're convinced that together we'll take our customers one step further by realising new ways of working, that is, more efficient, improved processes and higher productivity."

Patrick Roelandt, Ricoh Netherlands: "Ricoh has helped customers switching from time-consuming paperwork to efficient digital business processes for years now, innovation and a sustainable result coming first. Together with Qurius, we can take a step further by turning the entire process and related IT solutions into a sustainable digital one."

With the total solution of Qurius and Ricoh, purchase invoices are digitised and automatically processed in the customer's ERP system. Invoice Workflow simplifies the processing of the daily incoming stream of purchase invoices. The solution provides full transparency in the processing of purchase invoices. Besides, it is possible to integrate the purchase process into a SharePoint portal, which more and more companies use to manage their knowledge en documentation. The next step is to create approval workflows, for instance. Both Qurius and Ricoh are Microsoft Gold Certified Partners.
