

Bluedrop Makes First Sale in the US for Its State-of-the-Art Hoist Mission Training System

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland and Labrador--(BUSINESS WIRE)--April 29, 2019--Bluedrop Performance Learning ("Bluedrop" or the "Corporation") (TSX-V: BPLI) and its subsidiary Bluedrop Training & Simulation are pleased to announce that it has received contracts of over $2.0M CDN to deliver its innovative Hoist Mission Training System to Florida-based Logistic Services International (LSI) for the US Air Force.

The new HH-60W virtual reality Hoist Simulator will provide US Air Force crews the ability to complete rescue missions and specific hoist and crew communication evolutions in operationally relevant environments. As one of the first virtual reality hoist mission training simulators available within the US Air Force, this simulator will enhance crew readiness at reduced risk and cost while maximizing the value of flight operations.

"We are very pleased to achieve this 'first', that underlines our success in extending our reach towards new markets for both our products and services offerings" said Jean-Claude Siew, Vice President of Technology & Simulation.
