Incorporation of Issuer

McGraw-Hill Ryerson Limited (“McGraw-Hill Ryerson”, the “Company”, “we” or “us”) was incorporated under the laws of the Province of Ontario by letters patent dated August 22, 1944, and is governed by the Business Corporations Act (Ontario), R.S.O. 1990, c. B.16.

The registered and head offices of the Company are located at 300 Water Street, Whitby, Ontario L1N 9B6. The Company does not have any subsidiaries.

General Development of the Business

McGraw-Hill Ryerson traces its origins to two respected publishing companies — the McGraw-Hill Book Company, now known as The McGraw-Hill Companies, Inc., and The Ryerson Press.

In 1944, the McGraw-Hill Book Company, which had begun publishing in the United States in 1909, bought the Embassy Book Company of Toronto, incorporating it as a franchised distributor for McGraw-Hill, Inc. in Canada. It was called the Embassy Book Company Limited until 1947 when it was established as a wholly-owned subsidiary of the parent company and renamed the McGraw-Hill Company of Canada Limited.

In 1829, the Methodist Church established the Methodist Book and Publishing House, the very first publishing company in Canada. Egerton Ryerson, sometimes referred to as the father of Ontario’s public school system, was given the responsibility of founding the press and took it from religious publishing into the area of secular books. In 1919, the press took on his name and continued to publish in many areas: religious, educational, and trade. In December 1970, the McGraw-Hill Company of Canada Limited bought The Ryerson Press from the United Church of Canada and in 1971, the Company became McGraw-Hill Ryerson Limited.

The Company is a partly-owned subsidiary of The McGraw-Hill Companies, Inc. (“McGraw-Hill Companies”), which owns 70.1% of the outstanding common shares.

Three Year History

Annual Revenue for the Company was $88.0 million in 2009, compared to $94.6 million in 2008 and $92.5 in 2007.

Higher Education Division

The Higher Education Division reported a 3% sales increase in 2009, following minor decreases in 2008 and 2007. This Division has focused on expanding its ability to provide digital and customized products and services to the market. Sales of digital and custom products have increased significantly during the past three years. In recent years, this Division has also focused on increasing the number of locally-published titles. The drive to increase sales of “Canadian” product is a function of market demand for these titles.

School Division

School Division sales vary year-to-year based on government funding and curriculum renewal cycles. After significant sales increases in 2007 and 2008, sales decreased by 20% in 2009 as many provinces deferred educational purchases in response to shrinking education budgets. In 2007, 2008 and 2009, this Division published several successful titles in Math, Science and Social Science. In recent years, this Division has also focused on developing digital products for both teachers and students.

Professional Division

The Professional Division has experienced significant sales fluctuations over the past three years. In 2006, sales increased as the Division was very successful in penetrating the Language and General Reference markets. The Division also became a market leader in the Business category. In 2007, sales decreased significantly (from $10.5 million in 2006 to $8.7 million in 2007). As the Canadian dollar strengthened in 2007, consumers increasingly purchased from U.S.-based websites and retailers. The Company responded by reducing prices on a wide variety of titles in 2007. In 2008, sales were consistent with 2007 (an increase in unit sales was offset by the price decrease implemented in late 2007). In 2009, this Division reported a sales decrease of 7%, mostly driven by exiting an agency distribution contract. During the past three years, this Division has seen a significant increase in the sales of its digital products.

The Company did not make any significant acquisitions or dispositions during this three-year period.

Description of the Business

McGraw-Hill Ryerson publishes and distributes educational, general, professional, and reference products in both print and non-print media. The Company's operating units consist of the Higher Education Division, the School Division, and the Professional Division, each of which is described below.

Higher Education Division

The Higher Education Division serves the university, community college, and career college market. This Division publishes and markets books and digital products and services primarily in the following disciplines: Business and Economics; Science, Math and Computer Science; Social Sciences and Humanities.

This Division has accelerated the growth of its Canadian Publishing program over the past ten years. The result is that sales of Canadian titles now represent more than 50% of this Division's sales. This Division enjoys significant market share in the Business and Economics area. The Division continues to look for Canadian publishing opportunities in other areas as well (such as Humanities and Social Sciences).

In recent years, the Higher Education Division has also concentrated on developing technology products that can be used by faculty in combination with our core titles or as stand-alone products. Locally produced products such as iStudy, Lyryx and the new Connect products allow faculty to integrate these technologies directly into the classroom and help with student homework management assessment.

Our strategies of developing high-quality Canadian titles, offering the ability to customize our offerings, and working with faculty to develop technology-enabled learning tools, has helped this Division grow significantly over the past five years.

This Division's principal competitors in Canada are Pearson Education, Nelson Education (Cengage) and Wiley. The Company had approximately 16.4% market share in the Higher Education market in Canada in 2009 (16.7% in 2008), based on information provided by the Canadian Publishers' Council (CPC).

School Division

The School Division serves the elementary and secondary school markets, primarily Grades 7–12. This Division publishes and markets books and digital products in the following fields: Mathematics, Science, Social Sciences, Literacy, English, Information Science, and Special Education. While its core publishing activities are in Grades 7-12, this Division also markets and distributes products from the various imprints of the McGraw-Hill Companies Inc. that address the needs of the elementary school market.

Activities and results in this Division are significantly impacted by curriculum reform and government funding. The announcement of the timing of a change in curriculum is often the beginning of the publishing cycle for a title, resulting in pre-publication spending by the Company.

Targeted government funding and curriculum renewal cycles in a particular subject area can significantly impact sales. For example, in 2008, the Company published titles in Math, Science and Social Science in response to curriculum changes in several provinces. Several titles proved to be very successful helping this Division gain significant market share. In 2009, many provinces scaled back their spending in these areas, causing this Division to lose market share.

The Company's principal competitors in this market are Nelson Education and Pearson Education. The Company had approximately 12.6% market share in the School market in Canada in 2009 (15.1% in 2008), based on results provided by the Canadian Educational Resources Council (CERC).

Professional Division

The Professional Division markets and distributes books and digital products in the following categories: Business, Consumer, Education, Medical & Technical. These products are sold primarily to booksellers (bricks & mortar and online, specialty and general), wholesalers & distributors, public, academic and research libraries, through special sales, and direct to professionals.

This Division focuses on the effective sales, marketing and distribution of U.S. and agency products (this Division has minimal local publishing). This Division benefits from the breadth of McGraw-Hill Professional Book Group's publishing programs (both print and digital). Results in this Division are impacted by overall retail sales, which in turn are driven by consumer confidence and the overall strength of the Canadian economy. In recent years, results in this Division were also impacted by the strengthening Canadian dollar. As the Canadian dollar strengthens against the U.S. dollar, retailers and consumers look to U.S. based websites and wholesalers as sources for U.S.-based product. In response, the Professional Division regularly adjusts prices on a variety of titles.

The Division concentrates on high-demand areas such as business, medical and educational products, and works closely with all channels to ensure new titles are marketed effectively.

McGraw-Hill Ryerson's Professional Division's largest competitors are Wiley, Pearson Education's Trade Division, and Reed Elsevier's Medical Division. The Company's market share in the Trade/Professional market, which includes fiction and non-fiction categories, was slightly over 1% (relatively consistent with 2008), based on results provided by the Canadian Publishers' Council. In key categories, for example Business, and Languages, McGraw-Hill

Ryerson is consistently in the top three publishers in Canada. Market share information for the Medical market in Canada is not available.

Percentage of Revenue

No single product or service offered by the Company accounted for 15% or more of the Company's annual revenue in 2009.

Seasonality of Sales

Each Division experiences some seasonality in its business depending on customer segments. Sales in the Education Divisions (School and Higher Education) tend to peak in the months of August and September and correspond with the traditional opening of educational institutions. In the Professional Division, professional, reference, and medical sales are steady throughout the year while consumer or retail sales are strongest in September through December, spurred by holiday shopping. As a result, overall sales are heavily weighted in the third quarter of each calendar year.

Distribution Methods

The Company distributes its products from its distribution centre at the registered and principal office located at 300 Water Street, Whitby, Ontario, L1N 9B6. This facility measures 160,000 square feet, equally divided between office and warehouse space, and is fully owned by McGraw-Hill Ryerson. The first floor of the office space is leased to an unaffiliated company.

In the Higher Education Division, products and services are generally sold to college and university bookstores which, in turn, distribute the Company's products to end-users.

In the School Division, products are generally sold to school boards, provincial book bureaus or individual schools.

In the Professional Division, products are generally sold to booksellers, distributors, libraries and medical schools who, in turn, market the products to end-users.

Employees and Specialized Skill and Knowledge

As of December 31, 2009, the Company had 205 full-time and 38 part-time employees as follows:

Sales and Marketing	85
Editorial/Design/Production	72
Customer Service/Warehouse	35
Other (HR, Finance, A/R, Administration, IT)	51
	243

The Company maintains in-house specialized talent to meet customer requirements and is generally able to obtain the services of appropriately qualified personnel through normal course hiring processes when required. The Company uses specialized contract resources or consultants as required to ensure the needs of its customers are met.

Production

Approximately 57% of total sales in 2009 (57% in 2008) was generated from locally-produced titles. The Company employs a rigorous project-management approach throughout the production process, from idea conception through to final printing. The Company has its own Editorial, Design and Production team that is charged with technical production and layout of each title, as well as overall project management.

The Company uses several third-party printers in Canada, the U.S., and, increasingly, overseas for the initial print run and subsequent re-prints of its Canadian titles.

Related Party Transactions

The Company is a 70.1% owned subsidiary of McGraw-Hill Companies. Under long-standing supply arrangements, the Company purchases books and educational materials in the normal course of business from its parent company and various international subsidiaries of McGraw-Hill Companies. The Company purchased $24.8 million of inventory from the McGraw-Hill Companies in 2009 ($26.0 million in 2008).

The Company pays royalties to its parent company for any U.S. titles that have been adapted to the Canadian market. The Company also sells books and educational materials in the normal course of business to various international subsidiaries of McGraw-Hill Companies.

The Company reimburses (and is reimbursed) for common expenses shared with other McGraw-Hill entities.

Other Company Information

For Canadian products, McGraw-Hill Ryerson holds reproduction rights until the book goes out of print, at which time most rights revert back to the author.

McGraw-Hill Ryerson and Cheneliere Education (“DLC”) have a long-standing agreement whereby DLC is able to publish French translations of McGraw-Hill Ryerson titles for the secondary and post-secondary markets using the imprint “Cheneliere/McGraw-Hill”. This agreement, originally signed in 1995, includes the use of this imprint, adaptation and translation of McGraw-Hill Ryerson titles. The adaptation, translation and joint imprint sections of this agreement are currently slated to expire in November, 2012.

Risk Factors

Educational Funding Constraints and Curriculum Revisions in the School Market

Educational funding varies from year to year depending on the current government's budget and mandate in each jurisdiction. The annual provincial government mandates affect both the funding levels and curriculum revision cycles. The funding levels and curriculum revision cycles have an immediate and on-going impact on the performance of the Company's School Division.

Format and Delivery of Future Learning Resources

Changing media technology continues to affect the publishing industry in several ways: sales of non-print materials have begun to increase as a percentage of total sales; there has been an increase in electronic piracy over the internet; and, most importantly, the format of future learning resources continues to evolve. While the Company is working on leveraging the opportunities arising from these developments, there can be no assurance that one or more of these developments will not have a permanent and long-term impact on markets for the Company's products.

Competition from Foreign-Based Sources (Wholesalers and On-line Bookstores)

The advent of online bookstores in the U.S. and other countries has created an avenue for Canadians to purchase published products directly from foreign retailers, thus bypassing the Canadian marketers and distributors of the product. In particular, students are able to access a very large source of second-hand products. Sustained increases in market penetration by foreign-based virtual bookstores and wholesalers could adversely impact the Company's market share and financial performance. The impact of this issue varies in relation to the volatility in the Canadian dollar/U.S. dollar exchange rates.

Copyright

Court rulings in Canada have reinforced user rights. As media technology continues to evolve, publishers may find it more difficult to protect their content effectively. These factors may impact the future sales and royalties within the School and Higher Education industries from copyright collectives. Royalties are also impacted from the value of license agreements. The Federal Copyright Board finalized their evaluation of the School industry copyright tariff in the second quarter of 2009 (the decision can be viewed at www.cb-cda.gc.ca/decisions). The evaluation has been appealed.

Dependency on Retail National Accounts

While national accounts comprise a small portion of the Company's total business, their significant influence in the marketplace can increase the volatility of sales and returns and lead to less favourable commercial terms as a result of their negotiating power. In addition, some national accounts have introduced in-house publishing programs that compete with the Company's publishing program.

Labour Disruptions in the Education Sector

A labour disruption in the School or Higher Education markets can have a significant impact on the purchasing behaviour within these markets, depending on timing and duration of the disruption.

Uncertainty in Employee Future Benefits Costs

Changes in medical or dental costs or life insurance premiums for certain employees eligible for the employee retirement benefits may have an impact on the Company's results.

Foreign Exchange

A significant portion of the Company's purchases are incurred in U.S. dollars, while all its revenues are in Canadian dollars and its financial results are reported in Canadian dollars. As a result, major exchange-rate fluctuations between the Canadian and U.S. dollars will either positively or negatively affect net income. The Company is employing policies to minimize the impact of these currency fluctuations, including purchasing U.S. dollars when U.S. dollar-denominated liabilities are identified.

Related Party Transactions

The Company is a subsidiary of The McGraw-Hill Companies, Inc. which owns 70.1% of the outstanding common shares. Under long-standing arrangements, the Company purchases books and educational materials in the normal course of business from its parent company and various international subsidiaries of The McGraw-Hill Companies, Inc. The Company pays royalties to its parent company for any U.S. titles that have been adapted to the Canadian market. The Company also sells books and educational materials in the normal course of business to various international subsidiaries of The McGraw-Hill Companies Inc.

There can be no guarantee that the business relationship between the Company and The McGraw-Hill Companies Inc. will continue on terms substantially similar to those that have existed in the past. The Company views its relationship with The McGraw-Hill Companies Inc. as being strategic in nature, and any change in this relationship could adversely impact its ability to provide appropriate titles for the various markets in which it operates.

Risks Related to our Majority Shareholder

The McGraw-Hill Companies Inc. is able to elect all of the directors of the Company and to exercise control subject to applicable law. Our majority shareholder may have interests that could conflict with the interests of other holders of our shares. In addition, The McGraw-Hill Companies, Inc. is able to cause or prevent a change of control of the Company.

Seasonality of the Company's Business

The operations of the Company's business are seasonal, with approximately 40% of annual revenue recognized in the third quarter of the fiscal year, primarily due to back-to-school spending. As a result, in the Higher Education and School markets, the Company's annual financial results may be adversely impacted to a disproportionate extent in the event of poor financial results during the third quarter.

Dividend Policy

The determination to declare or pay dividends is entirely at the discretion of the Board of Directors of the Company, based upon recommendations from the Finance Committee of the Board of Directors, and will depend upon the Company's financial condition, results of operations, capital requirements, and such other factors as the Board of Directors and Finance Committee consider relevant. In addition to quarterly dividends, the Company declared a special dividend of $7.00 per share to shareholders during the fourth quarter of 2008 (paid in the first quarter of 2009). Previous special dividends include a dividend of $3.00 per share during the second quarter of 2007 and a special dividend of $1.50 per share during the fourth quarter of 2005.
