ArtGalleryLive.com Builds Online “Learning Center”

Thursday, June 29th, 2000 – ArtGalleryLive.com Management Ltd. (CDNX: ALV) has developed and implemented a robust “Learning Center” to add to its Community section on the newly redesigned site at www.artgallerylive.com.

The Learning Center is designed to teach collectors more about artworks so that they are better able to appreciate art on the ALV site. The research undertaken by ALV last month indicated that collectors were interested in shopping for art as well as learning more about art. Example art terms featured in the Learning Center include: Artist Proof, Juxtaposition, Metaphor, Diptych, and Composition.

The Learning Center has been designed with an effort to expose collectors to new terms every time they visit the site. On the entry page, two art terms and their meaning are featured on a revolving basis. Once inside, collectors are able to access nearly fifty art terms, organized alphabetically. Collectors are also invited to email the Learning Center with additional terms they would like described or added to the list.

“The “Learning Center” was developed and added to our Community section in an effort to help educate ArtGalleryLive.com members and site visitors. We are making an effort to make art more easily understood by prospective collectors and we believe the better educated they are the more likely they will buy from us.” stated ALV CEO, Peter Steele.

The Learning Center will continue to be developed over time with plans to include sample artworks to depict each term and video demonstrations.
