Recently Belmont has focused its attention on acquiring gold projects in southern British Columbia and in particular the area better known as the Greenwood mining camp.
This area has a very rich mining history starting in the late 1890's. We are returning to the richly mineralized area and in particular focusing on areas of previous mining operations.

By utilizing new technology in exploration and having a new understanding of the geology and structures that control the gold mineralization we have the potential to discover new gold deposits that may have been overlooked by previous prospectors and miners.
