The evaluation team is comprised of three individuals: Mr. Cheng Quan Le, Mr. Li Zongjin and Mr. Zhao Xinghua.

Mr. Cheng Quan Le has over 18 years of experience as a member of the Liaoning Provincial Bureau of Geology. During his tenure with the Bureau, he acted as a member of senior management and as senior mining engineer. He currently is the director and legal representative of the Center.

Mr. Li Zongjin, a senior engineer in geological prospecting, is responsible for the Center's geological affairs. Formerly, he worked as one of the heads of the Number 17 prospecting team in China's Gansu Province for over 30 years.

Mr. Zhao Xinghua acts as the senior geology advisor of the Center. He is a retired professor of geology who was formerly employed in China's Fuxin Mine Institute.

The Center's evaluation team is currently reviewing several promising projects for the Issuer's potential joint venture participation. These projects include the Paishanlou Gold Mine in the Haizhou District of the Liaoning Province, which ranks as one of China's most technologically advanced producing gold mines. In addition, Mr. Yang Dong, Director of the Jilin Provincial Exchange Center of Science & Technology, a partner of the Center, has also introduced a potential gold mine prospect that is located in the Jilin Province. The heads of both mines have expressed interest in partnering with the Issuer in upgrading mining operations, as well as exploration and development on the mine site and adjoining areas. There have been no discussions of specific joint venture terms.

The Issuer will continue to conduct due diligence on these potential projects through its relationship with the Center. In connection with this process, Joan Gu, one of the Issuer's directors, will be meeting with the heads of the mines in late March.
