YDreams November 2018 Corporate Update

HYPER AWARD, IAAPA and E-SPORTS

Vancouver, BC – November 22nd, 2018 – YDreams Global Technologies Inc. (TSX-V: YD) (“YDreams” or the “Company”) is pleased to present its November monthly corporate update.

Arkave VR receives AWARD:

In November, Arkave VR received the Hyper Award 2018, in Brazil. The award provides further validation that the Arkave VR is a one of the most advanced and entertaining VR platforms in the market.

“The voting took place recently through an online portal available to all festival attendee’s. Voters could support an individual product, case, company or solution that they believe is the most outstanding and highest quality experience in the VR market today” - Stated Hyper Festival in their public announcement.

The Hyper Festival is the most important VR event of South America and is sponsored by important brands like Facebook and Adobe.

IAAPA and record month for events

In the past 30 days, Arkave VR was booked at 8 events, creating a substantial source of revenue for the division. The Company is expanding this business model in North America through partnerships and creating a dedicated team in Brazil to support this increased demand for the product.

The Company recently made its first appearance at the largest event in the world for Theme Parks and Family Entertainment Centers. The event takes place in Orlando every year, with editions in Europe and China as well. Thousands of companies that supply services and products for the out of home entertainment industry were present. Virtual Reality had a strong role at the event this year, allowing Arkave VR to be measured against the best experiences available in the VR market.

The product was met with incredible enthusiasm and is being considered by several experienced operators. It was considered the most innovative VR solution with the best quality and available at a price range that is affordable.

The Company recently unveiled its latest version of Arkave VR, which no longer requires a backpack. Through a partnership with HTC and Intel, YDreams was the first to bring a full body, free roam VR experience without the use of backpacks or wires.

“Upgrading Arkave VR so it doesn’t require backpacks may seem insignificant but it’s a crucial feature for Family Entertainment Centers and Theme Parks Operators. It greatly increases the throughput of each Arena, allowing more players per hour and thus increasing margins for the operator.” – Stated Francisco Chaves, Head of Arkave. “Being the first company to accomplish this puts Arkave VR as a top contender for being the main option for FECs”.

About the event, Daniel Japiassu, CEO of YDreams Global stated: “This is by far the most important event for Arkave VR in terms of promotion. We are already planning to come back with a stronger presence next year. The number of requests and quotes from serious buyers looking for VR solutions was incredible and will only increase in years to come. We hope to close deals fast, some clients want to open Arenas before Christmas! Operators are eager to bring new technologies to their venues and Arkave VR is the full package”.

The event was also the first after signing a distribution agreement with Studio 41b and Dynamic Design. The companies work together and have an impressive list of clients like Walt Disney World and Legoland.

After the event, Arkave VR was installed in their showroom so the company can now easily demo Arkave VR for their many clients in Orlando and Miami.

New project for Energy client

This week the YDreams Global Studio Division launched a new project for one of its main clients Enel Energy.

The brand is a multinational corporation present in 35 countries on 5 continents and one of Europe's leading energy companies.

The new project was launched at an event in Brazil. The client represents the largest private energy provider in the country. The project's goal is to ensure the company's strong vision for green and sustainable energy is understood and to promote the services provided by the brand.

YDreams has delivered several projects for the client in 2018 and hopes to continue to grow the relationship in 2019.

eSports Event Teaser Announcement:

The Company would like to announce that it continues to intensify its initiatives related to eSports. As previously stated, the Company is working on a new product that combines eSports Tournaments, VR and complimentary interactive exhibitions.

The plan is to launch a gaming festival in Q2 2019, stay tuned for more news on this exciting initiative.
