

Northern Sphere Announces Resignation of CEO and Appointment of Interim CEO

Toronto, Ontario--(Newsfile Corp. - December 24, 2018) - Northern Sphere Mining Corp. (CSE: NSM) (OTC Pink: NSMCF) ("Northern Sphere" or the "Company") announces the resignation of Mr. A. John Carter as Chief Executive Officer ("CEO") and a director of the Company. The Company thanks him for his service over the years and wishes him well in his future endeavours.

Mr. Kelly Malcolm, currently a director of the Company, has been appointed to the role of Interim CEO. Mr. Malcolm is a Professional Geologist who specializes in the integration and interpretation of geological, geochemical, and geophysical data to guide exploration and development activities. Since June 2017 he has been the President and CEO of a mineral exploration company listed on the Canadian Securities Exchange and is an executive, advisor, or on the board of several public, private, and reporting issuer companies. Mr. Malcolm has worked in the mineral exploration industry as a geologist for several junior explorers and mid-tier producers, and acts as a consultant to several boutique Toronto-based finance firms. He holds a BSc in geology and a BA in economics, both from Laurentian University.

The Company is conducting a search for a new permanent CEO and will announce developments in due course. Over the coming weeks, the Company will be implementing various initiatives designed to improve the prospects of the Company and to create additional value for its stakeholders. These initiatives will include a detailed review of the Company's finances, investor material, and mineral exploration assets. During this time, the Company's website will be deactivated, so we encourage our shareholders and interested parties to refer to the Company's Canadian filings on SEDAR at www.sedar.com.
