The memorandum is in narrative form to provide investors with a detailed view of management's vision for the Company, its strategy within the current gold market and how it plans to capitalize for the benefit of its shareholders.

"We are excited for the mining community to read our investment thesis. As straightforward as this may be, this is a different approach to shareholder communication. An approach that investors might not have seen before. The mining and metals industry has always relied on the ubiquitous PowerPoint presentation for its communication. While PowerPoint has its uses, much is lost in translation and it's impossible to transcribe what is going on in management's head with a few pictures and bullet points. In this Orefinders investment thesis, we've clearly spelled out our views for all to see. I am confident that if investors take ten minutes to read and understand our investment thesis they will see the value in our strategy, assets and company given today's market pricing," said Orefinders CEO, Stephen Stewart. He continued, "With so much competition for investor attention, it's important to stand out and be different. But not just for the sake of it. Our team pays close attention to what the masses are doing, and we are careful not to fall into the groupthink trap. This is particularly true in the mining industry where credibility has been an issue. So, we are trying to be as transparent as possible by putting our plan in black and white terms and in a style that investors can relate to."
