RELEVIUM'S CEO ISSUES LETTER OF CLARIFICATION TO SHAREHOLDERS

July 3, 2019 - MONTREAL, QUEBEC – Relevium Technologies Inc. (TSX.V: "RLV", OTCQB: "RLLVF" and Frankfurt: "6BX") (the "Company" or "Relevium"), announced today a letter from Aurelio Useche, CEO to shareholders to clarify misconceptions and rumours in the market about a compliance news release disseminated on July 1, 2019 by the Company pursuant to a request from the OTC Markets Group.

Dear shareholders,

The Management of Relevium or any publicly traded company has the responsibility to dispel unfounded rumours, misinformation or false statements which result in unusual market activity. Misleading and manipulative promotion, positive or negative, clearly fall into this area of concern and must be immediately addressed.

As CEO, director and shareholder of Relevium Technologies Inc. I feel it necessary to issue this letter and issue a clear and direct clarification regarding inaccurate and misleading statements being made by independent blog and referral traffic investor website equity.guru and Mr. Chris Parry. On the article published today, Mr. Parry misleads readers with false allegations, which we feel should be of concern to all investors.

Mr. Parry states that the Company is under "promotional investigation" and provides a misleading opinion stating, "reveals worst disclosure ever". The fact is that Company is not under any promotional investigation, but rather it was contacted by OTC compliance on June 27th as it became aware of promotional statements made by unrelated third parties with potentially promotional content about Relevium Technologies. On its website on Promotion Policy, the OTC markets states that although a company whose security is being promoted may not be directly involved or even aware of a promotion campaign for their securities, all public companies have an obligation to provide accurate disclosure to investors and quickly address any misleading information that could affect the trading market for their securities. This is why we, upon the request of the OTC, we issued a news release in this regard.

Mr. Parry dangerously makes the insinuation that the purchase of 4.3M shares by my holding company, which was a private transaction conducted one month prior to the promotional activity are somewhat related. This statement makes Mr. Parry liable for defamation, libel and false light and I am taking this matter very seriously, under the advice of my legal counsel. Mr. Parry fails to disclose that I have never sold a single share, that I have participated on all previous financings of the corporation and that the purchase was made at a significant premium to market (north of 60%) in full compliance and disclosure. Mr. Parry fails to let the readers know that I have a spotless 27-year-old career with an extensive educational and professional background, including 21 untarnished years in the public markets.

Finally, Mr. Parry provides a misleading connection between the disclosure statements provided by the promotional news outlet and the Company. The fact is, that as disclosed in full compliance with OTC requirements, the Company confirms it was not involved nor recognizes the source of the said promotional newsletter. Regardless of whether Mr. Parry agrees or not with the disclosure statements of the third party, it is a statement used by many US based investor awareness companies. Our Company engages, from time-to-time, third party providers for investor awareness, all of which are standard in the capital markets. In full compliance with the OTC request, our Company provided a detailed list of the companies we have worked with in the last twelve months.

We at Relevium BELIEVE and are fully engaged in the success of our Company. We believe that the market has yet to fully recognize the value of our Company, but we also know that it is the execution of our strategy and not promotion that will eventually bring about the correct market recognition of the value of RLV. However, we also believe that recognition requires we reach a wider audience and we are committed to a fully transparent and compliant disclosure of our activities over the years to come.

Our company benefits from a very loyal and longstanding shareholder base and we will continue to focus on our mission and on building a leading and responsible corporation in the health and wellness market.

We thank you for the trust you have placed on us.

Yours respectfully,

Aurelio Useche, CEO

About Relevium Technologies
