

Facedrive's TraceSCAN Launches Pilot Project with Air Canada for COVID-19 Contact Tracing

TORONTO--(BUSINESS WIRE)--October 7, 2020--Facedrive Inc. ("Facedrive") (TSXV:FD), Canada's "people-and-planet first" technology ecosystem, is pleased to announce that TraceSCAN, its contact tracing platform offering hardware and software solutions, has started a pilot project with Air Canada to provide an additional layer of protection against the spread of COVID-19.

Air Canada announced today about the pilot project in a press release titled "Air Canada to Pilot Application of TraceSCAN Technology for COVID-19 Contact Tracing in the Workplace". The press release can be viewed at: <https://www.newswire.ca/news-releases/air-canada-to-pilot-application-of-tracescan-technology-for-covid-19-contact-tracing-in-the-workplace-897345300.html>.

This follows the recent announcement dated September 10, TraceSCAN has started shipping its Bluetooth wearable devices to business customers across various sectors to help employers navigate return-to-work processes for their workforce. In this pilot, Air Canada employees are assigned a dedicated wearable device, that can be worn as a bracelet, for COVID-19 contact tracing at the workplace.
