Plurilock Announces Master OEM Agreement

The agreement will deliver Plurilock solutions to numerous North American call center organizations that require safe remote work access

Victoria, British Columbia--(Newsfile Corp. - March 25, 2021) - Plurilock Security Inc. (TSXV: PLUR) (OTCQB: PLCKF) ("Plurilock" or the "Company"), a leading provider of invisible and continuous authentication technologies for enterprises, is pleased to announce that it has entered into a master OEM agreement with Baco Holdings, doing business as "Untangl". Untangl is a leading contact center technology solutions provider to integrate and resell Plurilock's products.

Untangl provides technology solutions to simplify customer and agent interactions for business that have high volume contact center organizations including business process outsourcing ("BPO") companies. Under the agreement, Plurilock's technology offerings will be provided to numerous North American organizations that require a strong cybersecurity infrastructure in order to provide secure remote work access to their large userbases. Plurilock's identity assurance products will be incorporated into its comprehensive contact center solutions platform, currently in development.

"This agreement advances our channel-led strategy in the new normal of remote work where companies permit their employees and staff to work at different locations," said Ian L. Paterson, CEO of Plurilock. "Remote operations are essential to companies that rely on extensive information exchange between critical stakeholders. Plurilock's cybersecurity products will protect employees from falling victim to security breaches during remote work, ensuring the safe flow of information within these businesses."

About Untangl

Untangl enables more efficient communication between businesses and their customers. They are committed to providing solutions focusing on contact center employees. The Untangl brand uses technology, process and data to help make each interaction an agent has successful. By driving solutions that simplify an agents job, Untangl is able to help create a successful environment for them to operate in. This approach is designed to drive retention and performance, all while delivering dramatically lower costs for their clients.
