Brian Gusko, Director stated “These particular mining rigs have been carefully selected in preparation for what the company believes is the upcoming next leg of the ‘crypto bull-market’ while focusing on profitability during the current market pull back.”

ABOUT ALEO

Aleo was born from a desire to achieve the impossible - to build a user experience on the web that is both truly personal and truly private. Aleo is the first platform to offer fully private applications. Aleo achieves this by leveraging decentralized systems and zero-knowledge cryptography to protect user data on the web. At its core, Aleo offers users and application developers unbounded compute with absolute privacy. By architecting Aleo as a blockchain that is private-by-default, open-source, and built for the web, Aleo believes Aleo is uniquely positioned to address the shortcomings of blockchain adoption.

About SiaCoin

Siacoin (SC) is the native utility token of Sia, a blockchain-based distributed, decentralized cloud storage platform. Sia acts as a secure, trustless marketplace for cloud storage in which users can lease access to their unused storage space. Agreements and transactions are enforced with smart contracts, and Siacoin is the medium of exchange for paying for storage on the network. The main goal of the project is to become the "backbone storage layer of the internet." Sia was originally announced in May 2014 before being revised and re-announced a year later in May 2015. It officially launched in June 2015. Learn more about Siacoin at Sia - Decentralized data storage

As of March 14th, 2025 SiaCoin has a market capitalization of USD $173 Million and has a 24-hour trading volume of $22 Million. SiaCoin hit an all time high market cap of over $2.4 Billion on January 5th, 2018 on 24-hour trading volume of over $94 Million. SiaCoin trades on over 57 Centralized crypto exchanges according to Coinmarketcap.com
