Peter Smith, Sasquatch CEO, commented, "This is an exciting time for our Company. With a great deal of work now done at our most advanced reclamation project, Mount Sicker, and permitting underway there, as well as significant advancements made in our project pipeline, including at Blue Grouse, Copper Road and Santana, we have determined that it is time to start investing more significant time and resources to investor outreach. Given the rather unique story we have, including a focus on waste rock removal and land rehabilitation, we have selected SOMA as our principal public relations agent given their proven ability to reach mainstream media outlets and relay aspects of our approach that not only highlight our vast potential, but also the greater community benefits that accompany our approach. We are delighted to start this next phase of our Company's growth with SOMA."
