J&J overturns the fairness pitch

The American company sets the business of fairness aside to stand with the global #BlackLivesMatter movement. But are other brands listening?

VIVEAT SUSAN PINTO & T E NARASIMHAN
Mumbai/Chennai, 22 June

For the lucrative market for fairness creams in India, stereotypes have never been a problem. For years, the advertising narrative has used fairness as a stand-in for beauty and confidence with great efficiency and impact; fuelling the desire for lighter skin tones and creating a thriving market for fairness creams, estimated at nearly ₹5,000 crore in size.

Both men and women, say experts, are equal users of fairness creams in India, with most personal care majors rushing to cash in on the fever. Some of the country's top players in the fairness category include names such as Emami, Hindustan Unilever (HUL), Procter & Gamble, Nivea, L'Oreal, Himalaya and Johnson & Johnson (J&J) among others. Now with J&J taking its brand out of the game, these brands have a larger slice of the pie to carve out, but is there a risk in doing that? Especially as the global narrative on skin colour and fairness moves away from the norms that defined the market thus far.

Alpana Parida, managing director, DY Works, a Mumbai-based brand and design consultancy, says, "It is time fairness creams desist from feeding the myth that fair is beautiful, directly or indirectly. Advertising today is about realism and people are celebrating real people in right earnest. Capturing them just the way they are. Jewellery, apparel and lifestyle brands are using darker models and celebrating the dark skin tone."

Brands such as Tanishq and fashion labels such as Sabyasachi have taken the lead to address this 'woke generation', featuring dark models in their campaigns over the last few years. On Monday, J&J joined the effort, when it said it had no intention of highlighting claims that showed fairness as better than any other skin tone. "We've made the business decision to no longer sell the Neutrogena Fine Fairness and Clean & Clear Fairness product lines," a company spokesperson said.

J&J was influenced by the #BlackLivesMatter movement raging in the US and other parts of the world. It is not the only company paying heed to the sentiment, however. Last week, oral care major Colgate said it would review a top-selling Chinese brand called Darlie, whose name translates to mean 'black person toothpaste'. And food and beverage major PepsiCo said it would rebrand its 130-year-old syrup called Aunt Jemima in the US, intending to move away from its racial history. In India, however, brands have still to acknowledge the issue, say brand experts. Marketers are coy about undertaking reviews of their fairness cream products, a highly lucrative business that continues to boom. Estimates by industry experts suggest that the market for fairness and lightening products in India has been growing at a steady clip of about 5-6 per cent per annum.

These are brands that have done very well, despite the changing notions around skin colour, because they are what we call closet brands that employ subterfuge, in the advertising and in the way they are consumed, said a senior advertising professional. There is a shift in the narrative with fair skin that was once considered to be a marriage requisite for women being amended to imply smooth, beautiful and even skin tones, as a former creative director with an ad agency says. And consumers continue to buy them, even as they denounce the racial implications of such a product.

Ambi Parameswaran, founder, Brand-building.com, endorses this view. "We may see surrogate advertising of fairness, like we see in the alcohol business. The shift from fairness to confidence has already been made by HUL. That may be the way for all brands to go." The shift from fairness to confidence has also happened in part by the decision of the Indian Health Ministry this year to slap hefty penalties on marketers making misleading claims including a fine of ₹50 lakh and a prison-term of five years.

KS Chakravarthy, co-founder and chief creative officer, Tidal7 Brand and Digital, says that painting the entire category with a broad brush would be unfair. "All business has been created to address a need. Yes, fairness cream makers have to be sensitive to where the world is headed and how you communicate to the audience of today. But painting the category as immoral is incorrect," he says.

For J&J however, there are no moral ambiguities in standing against the category.

Experts say while there could be a desire to lower investment cap, there may be implementation challenges.

"If the government decides to restrict FPI investments from border countries, it will be interesting to see whether the restrictions are placed on FPIs based in those countries or beneficial owners based in those countries, or both. Also, we need to see whether such FPIs will be completely prohibited from making fresh investments without government approval or whether they will be allowed to invest freely subject to a lower than 10 per cent cap," said Rajesh Gandhi, partner, Deloitte India.

At present, the investment by an FPI cannot exceed 10 per cent of the paid-up capital of an Indian company. All FPIs taken together cannot acquire more than 24 per cent of the paid-up capital of an Indian company. According to the Sebi regulations, FPIs are not allowed to invest in unlisted shares, and investment in unlisted entities will be treated as an FDI. Recently, the Centre had tightened the FDI policy for the seven neighbouring nations, with focus on China. "The step to cap FPI investments will definitely put more barriers on investments from China (given the earlier announcement of pre-scrutiny of FDI from the seven neighbouring countries). This step, however, seems retrograde, given that unlike FDI, FPI investors generally exercise no control or direct ownership in the investee entity and are financial investors mostly driven by short-term profits, rather than long-term strategic investments," said Atul Pandey, partner, Khaitan & Co.

At present, China doesn't feature among the top 10 jurisdictions when it comes to FPI investments in India. However, a sharp jump in FPI investments from China during the March quarter amid market meltdown had raised many eyebrows. FPI investments from China jumped more than 4 times during the March quarter. This was mainly on account of the People's Bank of China raising its stake in mortgage lender HDFC. Experts said Chinese FPI into India is higher than reported as holdings below 1 per cent don't get captured and reported that easily. In recent months, Sebi has increased its vigil on investments coming from China and Hong Kong. The market regulator recently asked custodians and foreign banks to provide a list of end-beneficiaries from China or with links to China.

Uddhav govt...

A spokesperson for Great Wall Motors declined to comment. Government sources say informal discussions have taken place between state and central officials, but there has been no advisory or communication from the Centre to suspend Chinese projects. "We may go slow on attracting fresh investments from China," a source said.

Apart from the ₹16,000-crore proposals, the state is expecting ₹8,000 crore investment in the steel, pulp and paper, and electronic system design sectors.

DHFL pre-tax...

The recovery from the moratorium accounts is forthcoming with Unlock 1.0 and commencement of field visits, it said, adding, the recovery will further improve in moratorium accounts during Q1FY21. According to the auditor's report, DHFL incurred loss aggregating ₹13,575.15 crore in FY20, thus eroding the net worth of the company substantially. "...the company's ability to remain as a 'going concern' depends on the outcome of the ongoing corporate insolvency resolution process," the report said.

In November 2019, DHFL became the first financial services company to be admitted into the insolvency process. The mortgage lender had received expressions of interest from 24 entities; some of them wanted to bid for the whole business, while a few others sought to bid for the company in parts. The committee of creditors has extended the deadline for submission of bids until July 24 due to the Covid-19 pandemic. In the notes to accounts, the management said ₹3,018.68 crore has not been reconciled while analysing the total assets, as it could not be mapped to any security against which this amount was disbursed. Hence the management decided to treat the amount as loss assets according to the asset classification norms. This has been fully provided for by the mortgage lender. The auditor report also stated that multiple accounting entries were initially recorded in certain customer accounts for receipts despite cheques or negotiable instrument not having been deposited in banks, as reported in 2018-19, and these were subsequently reversed. Such instances have now been informed to have been constantly reviewed by the present management.

Goyal...

"We are not saying that we only want swadeshi products in India. We want our businesses -- while becoming self-reliant -- to also engage with the world to get the best of technology and invite pools of low-cost capital," he said.

No crutches

Goyal stood firm against special protections for the domestic industry saying that his ministry remained focused on sustainable growth and not on giving "handouts" for exports. "Subsidies have never done any good for business. Instead, they have helped us remain dependent on crutches and never engage with the world from a position of strength and power," he stressed.

Various export sectors have continued to demand more export incentives given that large proportions of orders continue to be cancelled and global demand remains weak. Case in point, the Federation of Indian Export Organisations (FIEO) has demanded the government immediately expand the scope of existing export promotion schemes, besides allowing rollover of forward cover without interest and penalty, and automatic enhancement of limit by 25 per cent to address liquidity challenges.

Foreign capital

On the other hand, Goyal stressed the government is committed to proactively inviting foreign investments to set up manufacturing in India to not only serve the large domestic market but also use India as a springboard to export to other markets. The minister flagged auto components, textiles, sports goods, solar cell manufacturing, integrated circuit manufacturing, and electronic vehicles as key sectors in which sustained reforms have been taken and major opportunities remain for foreign and domestic investors.

Extra-provisioning...

While the RBI's June 7 circular does not contain the word "pandemic", its master circular of July 1, 2015, mentions it -- "There can be situations where a bank is put unexpectedly to loss due to events such as civil unrest or collapse of currency in a country. Natural calamities and pandemics may also be included in the general category. All these factors, which are beyond the control of the promoters, may lead to delay in project implementation and involve restructuring and rescheduling of loans by banks."
