NEARLY 74% GOT INCREMENTS THIS YEAR: FOUNDIT SURVEY

Over 85% professionals plan to quit even after salary hikes

MANU KAUSHIK
New Delhi, July 21

A STAGGERING 86% professionals plan to change jobs in the coming months even after salary increments in the just-concluded appraisal cycle, according to the latest foundit Appraisal Trends Report 2025.

The survey said that the intention to switch jobs is the highest among the employees who received the maximum increments of over 20%. The survey, based on responses from 5,108 employees across industries and functions, revealed that nearly 74% professionals got salary increments this appraisal cycle. Though overall appraisals are broadly in line with expectations, the actual increment amounts and sector-wise disparities have left most professionals discontented.

The survey further underscored that salary is no longer the only crucial factor in retaining high-performing talent. "This year's appraisal cycle reflects a growing disconnect between employer intent and employee expectations. While many organisations delivered annual reviews, job seekers are increasingly looking beyond compensation. They want growth, visibility, skill development, and work-life alignment. To retain talent in this climate, companies must go beyond pay and double down on clarity, learning pathways, and consistent communication," said Pranay Kale, chief revenue and growth officer at foundit.

With nearly three-fourths of professionals getting increments, FY25 has turned out to be a better year than the previous year when about 62% individuals were given hikes. In FY25, a majority of hikes ranged from 5-10% with just a small share exceeding the 20% mark. Some companies, however, tried to strike a balance in order to retain the top talent. For instance, 11% of those who did not receive any appraisals this year were offered promotions.

Key industries such as energy, banking, financial services and insurance (BFSI), and healthcare showed relatively balanced increments, while others such as advertising, education, and IT saw a higher concentration of professionals reporting no hike at all, the survey noted. In the energy sector, 26% of the professionals got salary increments of over 20%, which is the highest among 12 industries surveyed. Similarly, the BFSI sector had the lowest number of individuals (11%) with no increment.

The salary hikes in FY25 have come in the backdrop of a job market that remains cautious about hiring for the past few quarters, the survey said. In terms of experience, the mid-level (7-10 years of work experience) professionals have received the maximum hikes, with 19% of them getting over 20% salary jumps as compared to just 4% senior level (11-15 years) professionals getting a similar-range hike. The results also show leadership (15-plus years) and senior level had the highest share of employees who did not receive a hike.

Job functions such as marketing, communications, sales and business development have witnessed the highest number of individuals falling under the 20%-plus increment bracket while roles such as HR, finance and accounts saw the highest number of individuals with no increments.

Four-day work in a week raises well-being of workers: Study

A FOUR-DAY WORKWEEK might help with an employee's well-being, according to a study that trialled the intervention in organisations across the US, the UK, Canada, Ireland, Australia and New Zealand.

Researchers from Boston College in the US and University College Dublin in Ireland found that workers reported an improved well-being with lower levels of burnout, a better job satisfaction and physical and mental health — this was not seen among employees of 12 organisations where a reduced workweek was not trialled.

For the study, published in the journal Nature Human Behaviour, nearly 2,900 employees across 141 organisations in the six high-income countries worked four days a week for six months without a pay reduction. To maintain productivity, workplaces were reorganised with efficiency and collaboration improvements prior to start of the trial.

The improved well-being was attributed to three factors — an enhanced perception of one's own work ability, reduced sleep problems and lower levels of fatigue. "The results indicate that income-preserving four-day workweeks are an effective organisational intervention for enhancing workers' well-being," the research team said. —PTI

AAIB totally unbiased, Naidu on AI crash probe

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, July 21

THE AIRCRAFT ACCIDENT Investigation Bureau (AAIB) is "totally unbiased" and is carrying out a definitive and thorough rule-based probe to find out what exactly led to the Air India plane crash that killed 260 people last month, civil aviation minister K Rammohan Naidu said in the Rajya Sabha on Monday. Ten days after the AAIB came out with its initial probe into the fatal crash, Naidu said the investigation process is being carried out as per international norms and assured the Upper House that the country has a very robust aviation safety mechanism.

"We want to stand by the truth. We want to find out what exactly happened and that is only going to be coming out once the final report (of AAIB) is placed. We have to respect the process of investigation and once that process has happened, then we can talk about what happened, how it happened and then corrective measures (can be taken)," he said. Amid speculations over the possible role of pilots in the accident, Naidu said the AAIB's preliminary report talks about only what has happened based on the facts in the cockpit voice recorder and flight data recorder.

"I can say this in the House and to the people of the country that the AAIB has a very definitive and thorough rule-based process. They are very transparently looking at the (investigation) process right now and they are totally unbiased," the minister said, while responding to supplementaries. On June 12, Air India's Boeing 787-8 aircraft enroute from Ahmedabad to London Gatwick crashed into a building soon after take off, killing 260 people, including 19 people on the ground. Out of the 242 people onboard, one passenger survived.

On July 12, the AAIB released its preliminary report into the fatal crash. On July 17, AAIB said it is too early to draw any "definite conclusions" on what led to the crash.
