KPIT divests its Berlin-based Subsidiary to ANSYS

6 November 2016 - Pune, India -

KPIT (BSE: 532400; NSE: KPIT), product engineering and IT consulting partner to Automotive, Manufacturing and Energy companies, announced today that it has completed agreement with ANSYS, to sell its Berlin-based subsidiary, KPIT medini Technologies AG, which has been focusing on functional safety products. (Product brand known as “Medini”).

Medini is a functional safety product which has applications beyond KPIT’s focused industries and as a software product, needs a wider and different distribution network to reach out to other industries beyond KPIT’s focused areas.

KPIT is expanding its portfolio as a provider of services and platforms to automotive industry for product engineering areas such as Powertrain, AUTOSAR, Diagnostics, Infotainment, etc.

While KPIT will continue to provide services around the Medini tools, it would like to deepen its domain expertise by continuing to make further strategic investments in its focus areas for which the proceeds from this sale will be used.

“We are very happy about synergy in the tools strategy for medini and ANSYS.” said Kishor Patil, co-founder, MD & CEO of KPIT Technologies. “KPIT will continue to focus on functional safety services and be a long term strategic partner to medini & ANSYS”
