AGILITY AND INNOVATION : THE GREAT LAKES INSTITUTE OF MANAGEMENT WAY

With the onset of the coronavirus pandemic, like most educational institutions, we, at Great Lakes Institute of Management, Chennai were forced to move all our classes online. The pandemic presented us with the unusual challenge of using digital methods to impart learning, motivate and prepare our students in the new academic year. Our solution to this was 'Term Zero', an online learning series designed to provide current and incoming students insights and perspectives from prominent educators, scholars and thought-leaders. What we wanted to achieve with Term Zero was – that we would go beyond the usual offering, offer meaningful avenues for our students to engage with our faculty and each other, prepare them for the upcoming recruitment season and appreciate a variety of perspectives about how 'management' works in the real world through insights from industry stalwarts and academic luminaries. Term Zero was rolled out in four phases. The first phase was the 'Global Thought-Leader Series', which had my colleagues and peers from Universities such as Yale, Harvard, North Western-Kellogg, Chicago-Booth and NYU delivering lectures on topics including leadership, design thinking, the philosophy of business, finance and economics and innovation to name a few. The second phase was titled 'CXO Connect', a series of webinars by globally renowned CXOs of companies such as Accenture, TCS, Nestlé India, Ashok Leyland etc. who spoke about the issues that companies and their employees face in this day and age, best and next practices, troubleshooting and problem solving. These sessions further enhanced the understanding of the competitive corporate landscape and the level of skill and resourcefulness that professionals are expected to bring to the table. The third phase was our annual 'Successful Women in Management (SWIM)' initiative which showcases and felicitates successful women who have blazed a trail of excellence to break the glass ceiling and reached dizzying heights of excellence in their chosen fields. Our 2020 edition featured inspirational lectures from Ms. Indra Nooyi, Ms. Kiran Mazumdar-Shaw and Ms. Preetha Reddy. The fourth phase, the 'grand finale' week saw yet another fabulous line-up of speakers from different walks of life – Ace cricketer Mr.

"We stayed true to our core value - constant improvement through continuous innovation"

Rahul Dravid, actor R. Madhavan, WSJ best-selling author Prof. Vijay Govindarajan were among those who dazzled our students with their fine words of wisdom and thoughts on life beyond business. The overwhelming response from our students to the set of activities in Term Zero left us in doubt that we had done something right!

Not only had we responded strongly to the challenges posed by the pandemic but had also stayed true to our core value – constant improvement through continuous innovation. Since term zero we have scheduled more than fifteen Distinguished Thought Leader sessions for our students and have paved the way for them to not just be managers, but leaders with a holistic view about business, management and empathy. — (The writer is Prof. Bala V Balachandran, J.L Kellogg Distinguished Professor of Accounting and Information Management, Northwestern University. He serves as the Founder, Chairman & Dean (emeritus) of Great Lakes Institute of Management, India.)
