Key European Appointment

(ASX Code: AGI)

(Sydney, Australia) Gaming machine manufacturer Ainsworth Game Technology Limited (AGT) today announced the appointment of Mr George Steiner as Managing Director of its proposed European subsidiary, Ainsworth International GmbH.

Mr George Steiner, the former Managing Director of leading gaming group Bally Europe, has signed a five year performance based contract to manage AGT in Europe.

Based in the gaming technology centre of Graz, Austria, Ainsworth International GmbH, under the guidance of Mr George Steiner, will implement AGT's recently expanded international sales program and oversee AGT's established relationships in Russia and further develop current and new European markets.

Mr Ainsworth said, "The appointment of Mr Steiner, who has successfully established a number of gaming machine sales networks in Europe over the last 20 years and has established key relationships in European markets and will further strengthen the management team. This is a clear indication that AGT is determined to become a force in the European gaming market. We plan to make strong headway in the development of this important market during the current financial year and, as previously announced, we have already received substantial orders".

On 23 October 2003 AGT announced it anticipated making a small profit for the half year ending 31 December 2003 (subject to the orders in hand being fulfilled as expected and no provisioning being required in relation to those orders).
