Market commentary

Amid considerable turmoil on global markets, with conflict in the Middle East and the closure of the Strait of Hormuz weighing heavily on investor sentiment, global listed infrastructure (-0.3% in A$ terms) again outperformed broader global (-2.6%) and local equities (-7.2%) in March.

At the subsector level, surging energy prices made Midstream Energy the clear standout, with oil-focused operators benefiting from the sharp rise in crude oil prices. In contrast, Marine Ports was among the weakest performers, as supply chain disruptions hindered global trade.

Argo Infrastructure's portfolio ended the month flat. Over the six months to 31 March 2026, it is up +6.7%, well ahead of broader global and local equities, demonstrating the portfolio's diversification benefits.

Beyond the human toll, the war raises macroeconomic risks, including higher inflation and slower growth. In this environment, it is notable that many infrastructure businesses benefit from inflation-linked pricing mechanisms, often embedded in regulation or agreements, which can help underpin cash flows.
