- Net exports are forecast to recover, supported by stronger global growth

Trends in business investment

Source: Suncorp, ABS

Monetary policy remains highly supportive

- With the cash rate well below 'neutral', monetary policy remains expansionary
- The labour market has been a key beneficiary, with strong job growth and unemployment at a four year low
- The RBA is expected to begin gradually lifting rates from mid-2018

Inflation and interest rates

Labour market

Housing has clearly slowed

- Australian housing has slowed amid increased supply, reduced offshore demand and higher rates for certain mortgage categories
- To date, the indicators are more consistent with softer activity than a sharp downturn
- Our analysis of supply suggests that while there may be pockets of oversupply, it is not a nationwide issue due to the underbuilding before 2014
- Suncorp only lends to experienced developers, with the majority of individual development finance loans under $20 million

House prices

Dwelling supply and demand

Opportunities and risks

- Stronger global activity is boosting commodity prices and Australia's resource export outlook
- Rising fuel prices will lift inflation yet potentially impact household budgets
- Elevated household debt represents a risk. However, mortgage arrears are low and the RBA has observed that "most indicators of household financial stress remain fairly benign" (October 2017)
