AMOS-2 has reached the end of its commercial life

The Company hereby provides notification that it received notice from its subsidiary, D.B.S. Satellite Services (1998) Ltd. ("Yes") that Space Communication Ltd. ("Spacecom") had notified it that the AMOS-2 satellite (regarding which it was reported in the past that it had reached the end of its life) had reached the end of its commercial life and was no longer capable of broadcasting television broadcasts for Yes. Consequently, on March 31, 2017, Yes ceased using the AMOS-2 satellite and it is presently using the AMOS-3 and AMOS-7 satellites.

A special general meeting of the Company's shareholders is to take place on April 3, 2017, in order to approve the contractual engagement between Yes and Spacecom for an amendment/addendum to the existing agreement between the parties, for the purpose, inter alia, of leasing space segments on the AMOS-7 satellite (concurrently with use of AMOS-3). If the engagement is not approved by the Company's general meeting, Yes will be forced to use nine space segments on AMOS-3 only, in accordance with the terms of the existing agreement with Spacecom.

Supplementary Report - Class Action

Further to the Company's immediate report of December 12, 2016, regarding a claim together with a class action certification motion in an estimated NIS 160 million, which had been filed with the Central District Court against the Company in connection with support and/or warranty services as part of Internet infrastructure use, supplementary notification is hereby provided that on March 26, 2017, the court decided to strike out the claim in light of the existence of an earlier class action certification motion whose subject matter is similar to that of the struck claim.
