

NICE inContact Recognized in 2018 Shatter List for Actively Working to Break Technology's Glass Ceiling

NICE inContact chosen for promoting and driving diversity inclusion and measures helping transform technology culture

Salt Lake City, July 3, 2018 – NICE inContact, a NICE (Nasdaq: NICE) business, today announced it has been recognized in the Women Tech Council's 2018 Shatter List for actively employing measures to help break technology's glass ceiling. NICE inContact was among 44 companies recognized based on the development and successful implementation of measures that create inclusive cultures where women can contribute and succeed.

"Being included in the Shatter List requires a holistic and active commitment to creating inclusive cultures from the executive level all the way down to entry positions," said Cydni Tetro, president of the Women Tech Council. "The best practices these companies are developing and implementing to actively champion women boost the teams and individuals in their organization, while simultaneously helping shatter the glass ceiling for the entire technology industry."

In making the list, NICE inContact was evaluated and scored against hundreds of technology companies on executive engagement, company programming, community investment and women's or D&I (diversity and inclusion) groups. All data was gathered from 10 secondary data sets and required active demonstration of visible activities at all levels of the company showing commitment and progress in these four areas.

"Core to our success has been building an inclusive, supportive culture which gives a voice to each and every employee," said Paul Jarman, CEO of NICE inContact. "Our industry thrives on creating experiences where diverse input and perspectives are valued – we've applied that to how we build experiences at NICE inContact. We're pleased to be able to work with the Women Tech Council to further the cause of equal opportunity in technology, so we can collectively shatter that glass ceiling."

NICE inContact was recognized for its support and promotion of women in the technology industry. Criteria included:

- Executive engagement – Executive leadership support and sponsorship of the WIT committee and community outreach to support diversity.
- Company programming – A WIT (Women in Technology) committee dedicated to supporting diversity throughout the company.
- Community investment – Sponsorship of Women Tech Council, and participation in STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics) mentorship activities such as SHE Tech and on-site STEM events.
- Women's group – Active involvement the WTC Best Practices Forum and supporting women internally throughout the organization, including locations in Bolivia and India.
