ELMWOOD PARK, N.J., April 27, 2021 – BioReference Laboratories, Inc., an OPKO Health company (NASDAQ:OPK), announced its renewal as the COVID-19 testing provider for Major League Soccer (MLS), which began on April 17 along with the 2021 MLS season.

Similar to BioReference's role as the testing provider for the MLS is Back Tournament, BioReference is providing laboratory-based PCR COVID-19 testing as well as point-of-care (rapid) COVID-19 testing to players, match officials, and League staff for 13 Club teams.

In addition to providing testing to players, match officials, and staff, BioReference is working with the New England Revolution to test fans with field level seats prior to home games, which began with the Revolution's first season home game at Gillette Stadium on April 24.

"MLS was the first major sports league to utilize COVID-19 testing from BioReference in 2020 during its MLS is Back Tournament in Orlando," said Jon R. Cohen, M.D., Executive Chairman of BioReference Laboratories. "We continue to be impressed by the diligent work done by MLS' leadership to refine COVID-19 mitigation strategies and prioritize testing, in maintaining the goal of providing the safest possible environment for the players, coaches, staff and now fans as the 2021 season begins."
